COMMENCEMENT

Another "commencement" in the life of Western Kentucky Teachers College—another milestone in the history of the institution—has come and gone.

It is seldom, we think, that there have been so many really outstanding contributions to our commencement exercises as were made this year. The sermon of Dr. Ames Montgomery, dealing with the Biblical story of the "leaves and fishes" and its application to youth and the possibilities of youth, was appealing to both young and old. A more appropriate message of encouragement to the aspirations and hopes of a group of young college graduates could hardly be conceived than was given by Dr. Montgomery in the old but ever new Bible story which has appealed to people in every walk of life for nearly two thousand years.

Dr. John B. Kirk's address to the Life Certificate Class was filled with the rich knowledge of life and its duties gained from the speaker's long experience. A planner in his state in the idea of the value of a competent and trained teacher for the instruction of the youth of a nation, he has not only proved himself the leading advocate of teacher-training institutions in his home state but has become one of the outstanding leaders of the teachers' college movement of the present day.

A universal agreement exists among the people of this school and of the city of Bowling Green that the address of Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn to the Senior Class was one of the greatest addresses delivered here for many years. A man of varied and wide experience, he is especially fitted to address a class of young men and women who are about to quit the protection of their alma mater and enter new fields of experience. As scholar, educator, lecturer, and writer he united the qualities of all in his address dealing with the problems of present-day life. Any school would be fortunate to have the privilege of hearing these three men, and that here is a general expression of admiration on the part of the student body of Western for their contributions to our commencement program speaks well for the general understanding and appreciation existing among the students of what is really good and true in life.

SUMMER SCHOOL

When hundreds of teachers who have been seeking for nine or ten months enter school for the summer session, there is an evidence of professional spirit that has not always existed in Kentucky. That this professional self-interest for a general educational uplift throughout Kentucky is the opinion of the educational circles throughout the state.

Courses of study are so arranged in the summer schools of present-day American colleges that students may pursue such work as will help them in their profession, at the same time serving as recreation from the more difficult labors of the work demanded of one in his profession. When all teachers realize the great value of this training which enables them to "rest while they work," the summer schools will have an even greater enrollment than at the present time.

Western's enrollment this summer is larger than in the history of the school. We are told that the same increased enrollment is true in the other colleges of the state. No finer evidence of increased professional spirit could be expressed, and with the continuation of this spirit great progress may be seen for our state in the near future.

There are still people who refer to their Ford as "the car," but most of the population come boldly and admit the truth.

You can't get on your feet by keeping them on the ground.

MORALS AND CONVENTION

There is a difference between morals and convention. Morals have to do with matters concerning the human soul as well as of the behavior of the outer man. Conventions are inseparably linked with a Mrs. Grundy atmosphere; they are the passing fashion of behavior and not the living, pulsating laws of eternal rectitude. Morals do not change; conventions do change with every age.

This is an age of upheaval. Many say that there is a different standard of morals. It is not true. There is a different standard of conventionality. There was once an iron-clad system of rules of social custom. One was bound by the laws of this system more firmly than by those even of the government in the palmy days of Mrs. Grundy and Victorianism. That has all passed now. Many refer with scorn to their fathers' and mothers' standards of life. "They are so old-fashioned," they say. We desire to be free. The youth in our colleges all over the land are leading in this movement for liberty from the galling yoke of conventionality.

Perhaps that is well; perhaps it is not. But at least we would do well to be sure that in our digging at the foundations of the old and worn-out structure of crumbling ideals we do not destroy the only basis of a sound and healthful national life.

No nation can rise above its own standards. If we cast to the winds our morals and set sail on the uncharted sea of self-indulgence, there is no doubt as to the outcome.

The youth of today are happy, seemingly, in an unwonted and unhampered freedom. There is no restriction on their behavior up to a certain limit—and this limit is growing very hazy. "Do what you want to" is the slogan of the majority of the people of today. Not only is it true of the youth; it is even more true of their elders.

There is an alarming tendency to substitute desire for right thinking. It is perfectly in accord with the general spirit of jazz age to eat, drink, and be merry for tomorrow you may die. There always has been a certain class of people who were the proponents of this theory. The sons of Eli, as they made the Temple ring with their boisterous revels, shouted along this bacchanalian refrain. It is nothing new under the sun. Yet the modern rebels against morals would claim for it the merit of originality.

ROTARIANS AND KIWANIS

The visit of the Rotary Club and of the Kiwanis Club was appreciated by both faculty and student body of this institution.

The fact that business men take time from their many cares and duties to visit a teachers' school and that a student body of young people who are being trained primarily for the teaching profession highly appreciate such a visit attests well that a greater spirit of co-operation and fellowship exists among members of other professions and teachers than has existed in the past. That this spirit of co-operation may continue to improve and exist in the future is the desire of leaders in all professions.

It is a recognized truth that some American colleges are less known and the work of the colleges less understood by the people of the towns and cities in which they are located than by many persons in distant towns and cities. That this lack of interest in a home institution may never exist in Bowling Green is the earnest desire of all connected with Western.

The visit of these business men was sincerely appreciated by this student body, and each Kiwanian and each Rotarian is urged to come again.

ALUMNI

Perhaps no greater test of the love of an alumnus for his alma mater can be demonstrated than by his return—made frequently by great sacrifice—to his old college. That this is true is proven year after year by the return to Teachers College of many of her former students.

This year the former graduates of this school who returned during commencement were people not only in the teaching profession but in many walks of life. That their return proves their love for their mother institution is a self-evident fact.

It is often said that no school can rise higher than its alumni. If the standards and ideals of a college are false, they will be reflected in the lives of the graduates of that institution if the standards are true and good, they will make their impress in the thought and actions of her former students.

GOLDEN DAYS

(The following is an editorial for a local paper which we take the liberty to publish—Editor)

AT THE CHAPEL HOUR

The chapel hour yesterday morning at the Teachers College was one of unusual interest and importance. To begin with, it was a novel sight. The large audience of the entire college were filled with students. Hundreds of them had rarely seen so many people together on a Sunday morning. And all these were citizens in the making.

They were there with a purpose. To better their condition in life, and this purpose is done. The uneducated man has an opportunity of life which leads to happiness. The 1,700 students at the Teachers College are trying to avoid this fate. Our lives are short, and if we do not prepare for it, we have to take our place in the hereafter.

These young people are striving to become better citizens. They are imbued with the importance of their own selves and there are very few drones in the Teachers College. All, or nearly all, are doing it almost without exception. It was inspiring to look over that sea of faces and see the earnestness that they gave back and with the look of contentment which rested upon every countenance. They are engaged in a noble undertaking, preparing themselves for the duties of life, and in that work they are happy and contented.

And when one stops to think that the majority of these people are being taught to the end that they may teach, and when he considers how many people they may set on the road to education and all that it means, the figures become almost bewildering. The Teachers College is evidently doing a great work in teaching these teachers, for it means that education will through them be multiplied many times over. We know that the school is a big asset to the city in many ways, but we fear that our people do not fully realize that it is equally an asset to Western Kentucky—an asset in that it is doing more for the cause of education and for the enlightenment of the masses than any other school or any other agency. We visit the institution only occasionally, but every time we do we are more and more impressed with its beneficence and the great and immeasurable work it is doing. We honestly believe that it is without a peer among the educational institutions of the state. It is doing more good and going further in the education of the masses than any other school.

Many of the students will be leaving within the next few days for their homes to spend the vacation. Before they left, the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs of the city wished to meet with them in chapel exercises and express their appreciation of their having been with us of their having been minutes of our homes, of having all around our firesides and entered into our family life, and having this large measure become one of us. Plans were formed which will not be easily broken, and not only the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, but the people of Bowling Green generally, will wish them a full measure of life's happiness and all the success they deserve.

In The Day's News

Albion H. Baldwin, the new member of the United States Tariff Commission, is a recognized authority on foreign trade, and in recent years has written considerable on that subject. At present a resident of New York, Mr. Baldwin was born in Connecticut, sixty-two years ago and received his education at Yale. After his graduation at the New Haven institution in 1887 he went to Paris to study art. In the service of the Fish Commission, Department of Agriculture, and other branches of the Federal Government, his artistic talents were made use of in the illustration of many works on botany, ichthyology and zoology. From 1888 to 1908 he was employed in the service of the Postoffice Department, the Department of Commerce and Labor, the Department of the Interior, and the Department of Agriculture. In later years he has filled positions as chief clerk of the Census Bureau, chief of the Bureau of Domestic Commerce, and commercial attaché at London.

Today's Anniversaries
1719—Joseph Addison, the famous man of letters, died in London.
1775—Battle of Bunker Hill, the first important engagement of the American Revolution.
1825—The cornerstone for the Western is always proud for her sons and daughters to go on and do grand work. Jimmy Barnes A. B., '24, is doing work at the University of Wisconsin that is a credit to his Alma Mater. His Master's thesis on "The Effect of Congress has been completed and accepted." Jimmy has complimented Western by sending a copy of it to the library. The thesis is on display there and any one who wishes may come and read it.

The makeup is very attractive. The typewritten pages are bound together in a pamphlet cover. He has included many charts and maps showing the different members of the Congress and how the different sections of the country voted on the bills proposed. There are three blue-print diagrams made by the author's brother, Carl B. Barnes, of the Manual Training department of this school. The material shows deep research and the essay is both scholarly and interesting.

Notes of Sport

Water polo is much more popular in Great Britain than in America.

The first rowing regatta on the Hudson River course at Poughkeepsie was in 1837.

The first rowing organization in the American college was the boat club formed at Yale in 1843.

When first organized in 1899 the United States Golf Association had a membership of only four clubs.

Miss Cecil Leitch of Great Britain is the only woman golfer to win the British, French and Canadian championships.

The first center punch in America was built on the grounds of the New York Athletic Club at Mott Haven in the year 1871.

The Troland stroke, which is generally regarded as one of the best strokes for short-distance swimming, originated among the natives of the South Pacific islands.

A celebrated Finnish sculptor has been commissioned by the government of Finland to execute a statue of the famous runner, Paavo Nurmi, which it is proposed to erect in one of the public squares in Helsinki.

The first notable rowing regatta in the South was held at Charleston, S. C., in 1837. The races continued over two days and attracted famous crews and individual rowers from points as far distant as New York City.

Apart altogether from the money that changes hands in betting, no less than $600,000,000 is spent annually on horse-racing in England. This is about five times as much as is expended on football and more than twelve times the cost of cricket, which is still, nominally at all events, the English national game.

He had himself no well in hand he thought he'd do a trick And pitch his cap upon the bed and spit upon the stick. He set his mouth the proper shape, and stood out in the floor; He looked at the bed and then the hearth, and glanced at her once more. His hat into the place it went 'T was seen no more, he said, And through his fingers he did spit Quite calmly on the bed.

II. Mr. Sherman had doubtless never studied College Algebra when he gave that oft-quoted definition of WAR. If he had, he could not have said about war what he had already said about College Algebra.

If you are still guessing, Mr. Sherman would have said that College Algebra was synonymous with a four-letter word beginning with "h" and ending with "n", and meaning a place of unusually high temperature.

III. According to Mr. Page, most of us haven't yet experienced the high temperature necessary to convert iron and some other solids from a solid to a liquid state. Probably in time to come Mr. Page himself will be in a position to give us some first hand information on this subject. Who knows? The time has come. What in the course of human events it now becomes necessary to say our farewell say to a very humble Cog in the wheel Of the COLLEGE HEIGHTS HERALD.

And we are sad. For it means to us The leaving of Some very dear And kindly friends On the Staff And elsewhere— Especially Our very good friend Of the EAGLE EYE— The Editor. Now, she may not Let this go by But if it does— Well, there are others On the staff Also— And to them all I now bequeath My blessing.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

At the urgent beseeching of some of our readers, we have succeeded in securing the services of a noted expert in affairs of the heart who will undertake to answer your enquiries as to the probability of matrimony for a widow of sixty—and other interesting and heart-wringing queries accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope, and a substantial honorarium of Spanish, to be sent to the Editor.

We have already received the following communication, which Miss Heartsease will answer through these columns:

Dear Miss Heartsease:

I am a young man of twenty and somers. I have him in love. Several times with several girls but somehow they don't seem to find it out. When I look sweet at them they makes faces at me. I heard one say I was stinky. I ain't got no money to blow in, or Out either.

What I'd like to do to make them like me.

Do girls love Chocolates? What would be a good present for One for a Birthday?

I will appreciate yer assistance very much.

(Signed)—DESPERATE

Dear Desperate:

Yours is an extraordinary plight. Several notable men who are now on the faculty of great institutions were once like you. They succeeded—why can't you? Just do not give way to your inferiority complex and you will be surprised at the improvement. I gather from your letter that you are timid in the presence of the fair sex. That is why "that woman." They like Big, Brawny, Self Assured men. We advise you to take a course of physical training and become Strong and Manly. Then you will have courage.

It will never do to be stinky. Girls measure a man by his ability to stretch his bank account—before they marry him.

You wish to know them like you? Then be rough with them. Instead of meekly calling them over and asking for a date, walk over and hand them a line like this:

"Say Kid, you're going to the show with me tonight. Do you get that?"

Then when she has recovered from the shock, write the opportunity by the hair of the head and tell her you are going to pick her for your side-kick for life. Don't take no for an answer. They never meant it.

If instructions are followed carefully, something is bound to happen.

In regard to your query, "Do girls love chocolate?" I must answer that yes, emphatically do not. If you were thinking of giving chocolate, change your plans immediately, for you were on the eve of making a Terrible Social Error. No well-bred girl of today eats chocolate. It soils the fingers.

They all prefer All Day Suckers.

1. A PRACTICAL INTERPRETATION OF THAT OTHER THING.

That vague, ethereal, incomprehensible thing that, for lack of a better name, has been dubbed simply "That Other Thing"; is that subtle something about a student that makes him leave a fellow student's notebook when he so kindly offers to carry home his books.

AS WE SEE IT

A friend of ours went courting in the days gone by. He was young and not as fat as he is now. Of course there was a very attractive young lady whom he wished to impress with his sophistication and social.

You know it was the custom back in the country where he had his habit at to keep up a sort of rivalry in the matter of plain and fancy long distance spitting.

Mac had been practicing for months. Now was the time to assert his ability where it would make the most impression on the most important person.

It was a cold night and in the monster fireplace which occupied the whole end of the room a bright fire blazed merrily.

Coming in from the zipping cold outside, Mac, felt served to mighty exploits.

Oakland high School

Mr. T. H. Totten, another former student of this institution, is the principal of the Oakland graded and high school. Associated with him are four very capable teachers, including Mr. H. T. Goodrich, former assistant superintendent of Warren County. They have twenty-five enrolled in the high school and four seniors. Three of the four members of the graduating class will be in college next year.

One of the very marked evidences of growth in the Oakland school is the development of athletic facilities under Professor Totten this year. For the past six or seven years the teams had won no games. This year under the direction of Mr. Totten, as coach, the basketball team has won fifteen out of the seventeen games played.

Oakland is badly in need of a new building and at some future time they expect to have an adequate structure. They have very good prospects for a fine school next year.

MYSTERIOUS
OF FRESHIES

Juniors are Awarded the Forfeit Game By a Score of 9 to 0.

One morning in chapel about a week ago a spectacular challenge was defiantly hurled to the faces of the Junior class by the Freshmen. The Juniors took no notice of the first challenge, deeming it a piece of preconcussion on the part of the Freshmen. The Freshmen continued to ignore the challenge for the next two or three days on the campus, in the halls, or on the streets.

The Juniors accepted the challenge on the following Tuesday, and due announcement was made in chapel that the game would be played on the field at 2 o'clock that afternoon. Two o'clock came, and the Juniors were on the field, headed by Captain Glasgow of the Varsity team. But lo! no Freshmen!

The Juniors took their battling warriors, "Pan" Glenn, Dewey Barnes, Earl Houston, Ernest Howton, Lowell Valentine, Morris, and "Pyxie" Fraiser were a few of the stars for the Juniors, and their workout was fast and snappy.

The Freshmen appeared to have lost their enthusiasm for the blood of the Juniors, figuratively speaking, and they one and all gave the athletic field a wide berth. This day was of course awarded the game by a forfeit score of 9 to 0. They were a disatisfied group of players, however, for they had counted on a great deal larger score than that.

Anyone having a clew as to why the Freshmen avoided the athletic field so consistently on Tuesday afternoon, June 2, will be rewarded if he will report the reason to any member of the Junior class or the above players.

PERKINS STARS IN MID GARDEN

Umpires and Score-Keeper are Blamed for Final Result, But This Detour Failed to Bring

In a game featured by heavy hitting and errors the faculty finally emerged victorious in the annual contest with the Seniors of Western. There is no question but that great ability was displayed on both sides.

The game was called at 4:10 P. M., on Tuesday afternoon. Perkins went to the mound for the Seniors, with Taylor at the receiving end, but he was speedily driven from the mound by the hard hitting and daring base running of the faculty. Liles from third base took his place. Liles pitched a steady consistent game and if given the proper support would have won the game for the Seniors. Myers was the faculty slabanman selected to start the game with Diddle behind the bat, but he, too, was driven to the showers comparatively early in the game and was relieved by Theophilus, but the unquenchable remains of Senior players were not affected by this manifestation of illwill and lack of sportsmanship on the part of the faculty athletes. The much touted Diddle, on whom the faculty had counted so much failed to get through, however, as in four times up he ignominiously struck out twice and never reached first a single time, or as some one facetiously put it, "He ain't never reached first till yet!"

On the whole, the game was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Who won? We do not know at this time as the score book is not before us but WE BELIEVE THAT THE SENIORS DID. THEY DESERVED TO WIN, ANYHOW.

Before the game was called, Coach Diddle, star catcher for the faculty, decided to take no chances and informed the crowd that all students who rooted for the Seniors would straightway and forthwith be flogged. Two of the more weak hearted members on the bench of the seniors left at the mention of this but the unquenchable remains of Senior players were not affected by this manifestation of illwill and lack of sportsmanship on the part of the faculty athletes. Many of the alumni of the Bowling Green High School who are now in Western attended the annual chapel and banquet of the commencement exercises. Among those who attended are Miss Vivien Wilson, Hazel Kinshaw, Margaret Wright, Olivia Kirby, and others. Miss Kirby, accompanied by Miss Wilson, sang at the commencement chapel.

The events were well attended and enjoyed.
